Born-February 22, 1796	Feb. 9,	Born-April 5, 1800
Died-November 19, 1885	1815	Died-December 14, 1862

Joseph and Margaret Dix Swaim were farmers of Randolph County, Randleman, North Carolina, where they lived the rugged life of farmers and produced a large family of fourteen children. The sketches by two grandchildren of this family gives much information of the lives of this couple and the sorrow and unrest that was caused by the Civil War. One member of this family has pictures of the old home, also of the grave stones at Level-Cross Cemetery near Randleman, North Carolina where Margaret and Joseph were buried and also the names and dates were checked from these pictures for corrections. Their fourteen children:

John Milton Swaim	Born December 20, 1815 Died December 9, 1821

Jesse Walker Swaim
10th child of ~~John~~ Joseph Swaim & ~~Elizabeth Vickery~~ Margaret Dirp

Jesse Walker Swaim when a young man lived on a small farm near Randleman, N.C. He was an ardent supporter of Lincoln and the Union. Those convictions were not pupular with many in this section in the 1860's.

A popular place in those days was the local depot where people would gather of an evening to get the latest news as it came over the wires. I think ti was in the spring of 1861 that grandpappy Jesse procurred a Northern paper containing a fiery speech for the Union. He thought it might enlighten the local people so he went one evening down to the depot, took a commanding position on the station platform and proceeded to read the speech to them.

Evidently it was not taken so he had hoped, for the next morning during breakfast one of his brothers came to tell him that the Rebels were on the way to impress him into the service. He gethered up the baby Alice while grandmammy, Catherine crammed a few clothes in a bag and they were just able to get on the last train for the North as the Rebels took up the rails behind it.

I have often wondered what became of their possessions, for the breakfast dishes were left on the table and the mules in the barn. After the war was over, grandpappy being estanlished in the sawmill business at Coloma here in Parke County, would never go back to see if anything could be salvaged.

Henry Elliott Swaim
14th son of Joseph Swaim & Margaret Dix

Henry married Susanah Jane Osborn and had one daughter, Molly Swaim.

Joseph "Sylvester" and Henry Elliott Swaim, brothers, were conscripted in the Civil War to fight in the Confederate Army against their will and their belief. They wished to make their way north to the Union Army and they watched constantly for a means of escape. They were sent, by the Confederate Army, to the salt works at Wilmington, N.C. During this time, the Union Army often sent boats along the coast to bring back those who wished to come north. On one of these trips, Sylvester and Henry swam out to the boat, but it was already overloaded and the occupants of the boat beat the hands of the would-be northerners to keep them from entering the boat and endangering the lives of all.

Having made their escape, Sylvester and Henry returned to their home where they found their mother in poor health. One day when they were sitting on a fence watching the hogs eat, a couple of rebels surprised them and took them prisoner. They asked if they might go to the house to get a few things and suggested that their mother would give them dinner. Since the rebels were in need of food, they excepted the idea quite readily. As the rebels entered the house, they places their guns outside the door. When they had finished their meal, the Swaim boys and the guns had disappeared. Realizing their mistake in leaving their guns in such a place, the rebels walked away without a word.

Sylvester and Henry hid out and gradually made their way north to Ind., where their brother, Newton, lived. Their trip was filled with hardship, for they traveled mostly at night, swimming rivers when necessary and eating what they could find. The war had ended before they reached their brother. They had never seen Newton before, as he was older and had left home before they were born.

The boys never saw their mother again. She died Dec. 14, 1862.

Jonathan Swaim was born in Gilford Co, N.C. He stayed in the state of his birth till he was a grown man, then he came to Ind. in 1837 on a plug horse and $15.00 in cash.

He started out as a shoemaker and teamster picking up work as he could untill he saved enough to buy 40 acres of land near the mouth of Sugar Creek, where it empties into the Wabash, here he fed and sold stock by flat boat to Cincinnati and New Orleans. The above was taken from Bloomingdale Women's Souvenir of 1908. Also Parke Co. History and Parke & Vigo Co., of 1880. Eleanor Woody who was born Jan. 28, 1825, was the daughter of Mary Holliday and John Woody, she moved with her parents and eleven brothers and sisters to Parke Co. from Orange Co. N.C. in 1829. Her father disliked slavery so he chose this part of the country for his home. Eleanor was one of the first pupils in Bloomingdale school, which was located where the Quaker Church stands now. She was a Friend. After Jonathan and Eleanor married, Sept. 1, 1844, they built a home in Annapolis, later the home was east of Bloomingdale where they lived for 56 years. Three times Jonathan went back to N.C., once he brought his parents to Tangier, Ind. where they died at the home of their son, Jospeh. The burial of both parents at Tangier Cemetery. Jonathan's last trip was to celebrate his 80th birthday at the old home in N.C. He died the next fall from heart trouble and dropsey. He was a Republican. He collected 500 acres of land which he divided among his children, his homestead was number among the well-regulated estates of Parke Co. He had eight children;

Ollie Swaim owned and operated a funeral home at Summerser, Ky. where his present wife still carries on. Ollie Swaim and his first wife are buried beside his parents at Rockville, Ind.

Harry Swaim married Celia Newlin who was born Mar. 8, 1877. She died May 1, 1957 at Bloomingdale, Ind. They were married Dec. 20, 1899 and had no children. Harry, an excellent carpenter, at which trade he worked in Ind. Col, Terre Haute, & Texas. In 1900 he & Celia moved to Texas where he bought an 80 acre farm and lived there for twenty years but in 1936 becauses of her mothers sickness and fathers death, Celia returned to Bloomingdale and after a few months Harry sold out in Texas and returned home and they lived in her parents home till after Celia's death.

BIOGRAPHY of J. B. SWAIM

COLONEL JEHU B. SWAIM, OF
Parke County, Indiana

By request, I write the following biographical sketch of my father, Colonel Jehu B. Swaim.

I, having been selected by father as executor, to close his estate, all his books and papers passed into my hands; and from these, with the aid of my memory, I will try to give as clear and authentic account as possible, of a man who was an active resident and leading character of Parke County Indiana nearly all his life.

I will first go back in this narrative sufficient to trace, a little of, the geneology of our immediate ancestors.

There were three of the Swaim brothers, who came from Holland in the latter part of the 17th century, and settled on Statton Island, N. Y. for a short time. They became separated, and my grandfather, Michael Swaim, moved to North Carolina, and settled on a small farm in Wilkes county. Michael Swaim was born January 27th, 1780, and his wife, Betsy Barnes-Swaim, was born February 10th 1779. Here on this little farm, they raised a family of ten children. Father, Colonel Jehu Barnes Swaim, the subject of this sketch, was the oldest child, except a sister named Sally. Father was born April 25th, 1803, and it was here on this little farm of sterile soil of old North Carolina that he began his career as a farmer boy.

Grandfather removed from North Carolina with his family in about the year 1819 or 1820, and landed in Parke county Indiana, a little before father was sixteen years of age. They settled on school land in Section 16 Adams Township on the foothills directly west of the present bridge across Little Raccoon on the Rockville and Mansfield gravel road. The flat lands between these foothills and the creek were considered swampy and worthless at that time.

At this place they made a small clearing in the green woods and put up a log cabin. As wild game, such as bear, deer and turkey, were plentiful, it is evident they gained much of their subsistence from this source. Indians too were plentiful, but friendly. They often would come by and beg a pot to cook their game in. After feasting and feeding their dogs, they would start out, single file, up through the dark forest, saying "Indian go catch laccoon."

Part 1

Father would never go far from the house without his gun. Here is an instance, among many others, I have heard him relate.

Taking his gun one evening, he started out to look for the cows. On going up a brushy ridge, he chased a little cub bear up a small tree. At first he hesitated to shoot it: knowing the cub, when shot, would scream and if the mother bear were in hearing, as she was apt to be, she would come immediately to its rescue. Considering his gun was a flint lock, and had to be loaded from the muzzle and primed, which required a little time and much care, it would give him little chance for self defense. But he decided to risk it. Sure enough, the little cub clung a moment and screamed. He reloaded as rapidly as possible, expecting every moment the old bear would be upon him. But she did not come, and he secured his prize and hastened on.

Father was familiar with the hills about Rockville before there was scarce a stick amiss. He was one of the party in surveying the town site.

One evening, after they had finished their work for the day, and were sitting on some large granite boulders in the shade on the plot of ground they had laid out for the public square, the discussion came up as to what the town should be named. Whereupon, one Mr. Joseph Ralston, stood up on one of those boulders and said, ''I suggest the town be called 'Rockville' in honor of these big rocks here.'' After a little discussion, the suggestion was agreed upon, and the town was so named.

Father was married February 26th, 1824 to Mrs. Nancy Johnson-White with two small children. When he married, grandfather moved to a small farm near Nyesville, and died shortly afterward.

Father's wealth at this time consisted of a gray horse, and ax and a buckskin suit of clothes. He was, evidently, married in his best suit, and was at the foot of the ladder, ready to begin a long career of usefulness.

Father leased and remained on section 16 for several years, during which time in 1830, he bought a lot No. 100 in the town of Rockville, for $30.00. Upon this he erected and operated a wool carding factory.

In 1834 father bought the W. ½ of Sec. 15, Tp. 16, N. R. 7 W., 80 acres of school land adjoining this, in Washington township Parke County, Indiana, and after twelve years of occupancy under lease, he bought this 80 acres of the school commissioners for $320. Upon this land, which lies one and a half miles Southeast of Marshall, he established his home, improved it, and lived there for a good many years. In building his house, he wanted something more neat than a hewed log, so he whip-sawed the logs by hand. This process is accomplished by placing the log above a pit, or on tressles, so one man could stand underneath and one on top the log, and the saw was passed up and down through the log from end to end. He later built a frame addition on the West end, and in time, built a large barn, and shingled it with hand shaved black walnut shingles.

Here he set out a large orchard of select apple trees, intersepted with many peach trees. I see from an old list (no date given) that they sold dried peaches at a dollar a BUSHEL. John G. Davis heads the list for two bushels, $2.00. These peaches were not dried in the sun, as one might suppose; father made a drying kiln for that purpose, on which they were dried.

In 1842 father took the oath before R. M. Gilkeson J. P. to carry the U.S. mail on route No. 2590 between Terre Haute and Crawfordsville. He employed one Mr. Burton to carry on the lower end of the route, and himself, or one of his boys, George or William, (most usually George) carried on the upper end. Mr. Burton would leave Terre Haute in the morning and call at Roseville and Rockville and reach father's by noon. Then George would take it and calk at Bruins Cross Roads, now called Guyon)' Waveland, and on to Crawfordsville. Leaving Crawfordsville early the next morning, he would reach home by noon, to make the transfer. This mail was carried on horseback the year round, through rain or shine, sleets or snow. No bandits to encounter them.

And right here let me digress sufficient to tell something about the letters and handling of the mail, as evidenced by old letters in my possession. In those days there were no envelopes in use, and no dating stamps, or postage stamps in use. Letters were usually written on large sheet of paper, with one page left blank for the address, and so folded that one end would tuck in and sealed with small wafers made for the purpose. The post master had to write in ink the Post Office, date, and amount of postage paid on each letter. This condition prevailed from 1825 to 1853. The amount of postage paid was 5 cents, 10 cents, 12½ cents, 18¾cents, and up as high as 25 cents, governed by the distance. A sort of zone system it would seem.

In those colonial days they used a great many English and Spanish foreign coins, such as the ''four pence''; six pence''; (6¼ cents) ''bit'' (12½ cents) ''shilling'' (16 2/3 cents) and the Spanish ''real'' that varied in its rating. This accounts for the fractions in the payments of postage.

In 1827 father's tax receipt in full, for county and state, was $1.25, signed A. M. Puett, collector Parke County.

In 1831 his taxes in full for county and state was $2.08, and on his carding factory in Rockville, $2.65.

I have a'List of Lands taxable in District No. One, in Washington Township 1835.' In this list, father's name is mentioned, giving the numbers of the 80 acres he owned at that time, with an assessment for taxes of twenty-four cents (.24). There are fifty five pieces of land listed, and a uniform tax of that amount on all of it. This list must be authentic as it is signed, ''Test, John G. Davis Clerk.''

Considering his taxes on this same land for 1836, as indicated above, this would seem to be some sort of a special assessment; and yet there is nothing to show that such is the fact.

Father, after getting established in his new home in Washington township, supplied the family with large and small spinning wheels, reel, loom, and other necessary accompaniments to manufacture yarn, it was dyed in a few colors obtained by the use of Indigo, walnut hulls, peach tree leaves, ecc., and then woven into cloth that supplied much of the needs of the family. Rag carpets was also woven on the loom.

They sometimes raised a patch of flax, which had to be put through the different processes of bleaching in the sun to make the straw dry and brittle, then put through a flax-break to break the straw up fine, then swingled over the end of a board driven in the ground, to knock the straw out; then finally combed through a flax hackle to shred it up fine and clear it of every particle of straw. Then it was spun on a small wheel into fine sewing thread for general domestic uses.

In those early days there were few cook stoves in use, so the cooking was done at the big fireplace in the chimney. This, however, did not detract from its healthfulness.

Father was a natural mechanical genius. He supplied himself with a cobbler's set of tools, and would make or mend his harness; and made the boots and shoes for the family. He made my first ''little red top boots,'' and a proud boy was I. He would work at the forge, and shoe his own horses, sharpen his plows, and mend his wagons or tools, but I don't think he ever owned a blacksmith shop of his own.

He bought and brought into the neighborhood the first wheat threshing machine ever seen in that vicinity, and persons came for miles to see it thresh. It was what was called a ''ground hog!'' It just simply separated the grain from the straw, and run it all out together. The straw was then run off a little distance, by hand and stacked, while the wheat and chaff was scooped up into a rail pen, the rails being wrapped with straw to keep the wheat from running out. The chaff and wheat were separated later on by running through a fanning mill.

Father's school opportunities were very limited. During the few months that he attended school he said he never ''ciphered'' but a half day. He evidently gained much of his education through necessity, by practice in every day life. He could compute interest, keep his own books, and transact all ordinary business. He wrote a very legible plain hand, and usually spelled his words correctly. And right here let me add, that in those early days, there were no blank forms for notes, receipts and other legal papers, so that they all had to be written out in full. Notes were given to be paid, sometimes in work, and in all sorts of commodities. As a novelty, let me give a few samples.

''On or before Christmas next I promise to pay unto Jehu B. Swaim the sum of three dollars in trade, it being for value received of him this twentieth day of March 1816.

(signed) John Baskett (Seal)
Attest Michael Swaim

''On the first day of April eighteen hundred and twenty-six, I promise to pay Cornelius Sunderlin or his order, eight dollars in cattle, pork or work at market price, as witness my hand and seal, August 16, 1825.

(signed)Jehu B. Swaim (Seal)
Attest E. H. Leonard

Another:

''July 16, A. D. 1825, For value received I promise to pay or cause to be paid to Edward M. Elsey, three hundred rails.

(Signed) Jehu B. Swaim

The second name to those notes, are not to guarantee their payment in any way, but simply as a witness to attest the transaction.

Religiously, father was naturally devotional, and having joined the Baptist church when he was but ten years of age, he remained a Baptist all his life. He was an active leader in church work.

He was one of the trustees of old Goshen church, and did much in the erection of that church. He served as deacon in that church, as well as in the New Discovery church, to which he moved later on. He served these churches as clerk much of the time, for a good many years. As was the custom, the clerk was usually selected to write the annual church letter, and appointed as one of three delegated to bear that letter to the Freedom Baptist Association. It was not unusual on such occasions, that he was selected to serve as clerk for the association. He would not shirk a duty, or avoid a responsibility. He was reputed to be the best parliamentarian in the church. He was very firm in his convictions of right and duty, and would not swerve therefrom, because of blame or censure.

Father was always a Jeffersonian democrat, because he believed that the party was deep rooted in the principles of a popular government, for the freedom and equal rights of all.

To trace father's military career, I must go back to old North Carolina, and revert to his father, Michael Swaim, who gave him his first military training. Grandfather was a captain in the war of 1812, and also a captain of a company in the state militia. Father's military discipline began when he was but ten years of age, when he would stand before his father's company, with his little wooden gun, and ''fugle'' for them as it was called; that is, he would go through the manuel of arms-all the movements of handling a gun, as the captain gave the command, to show the company how it was done.

After he came to Indiana, and became of military age, he joined the 50th regiment located in Parke county. He was placed in a company of which Henry Slavins was captain, and in time he began to advance.

In 1831 he was elected ensign, and in 1836 he was elected major, and in 1839 he was elected captain of a company. In 1842 he was elected colonel of the 50th regiment, Indiana militia, and served in that capacity for ten or twelve years.

He was sometimes called upon to take command of the 16th Brigade at the general muster, which I think came but once a year. He kept the 50th regiment together in good condition; kept up all the musters, drills and elections as required by law, and his regiment was the last in the state to disband, for which he received a complimentary letter from the governor, Joseph A. Wright.

Father's military uniform was something elaborate. The navy blue cut-away cloth coat was trimmed with three rows of bullet shaped brass buttons and braid in front, and at the pockets, cuffs and other places; and gold fringe epauletts; also a chapeau, or ''cocked hat'' as it was sometimes called. A most beautiful dark red silk sash, which was worn around the waist. This sash we will keep in the family as a sacred heirloom. Besides these, there was a dress sword; a most beautiful blade with pearl hilt; also pistol holster, pistol and spurs.

His military saddle was trimmed with blue cloth, stitched and worked with red silk, back of the leather skirts, and down the martingales in front; and all this ornamented with many silver plated buttons the exact size of our 25 cent coins, with the United States eagle design and the letters ''U. S. I.'' at the top, and ''R. E. Gt.'' at the bottom on them.

The saddle, of course, was stripped of its ornaments and used; but the ornaments, together with the uniform, has been sent to the State Museum at Indianapolis. I consider there the proper place for them, as the militia in which he served was a state institution.

In about 1853, father sold his farm in Washington township, and bought 183 acres in the New Discovery neighborhood, where he made it his home for the remainder of his life. Here he engaged in the fine stock business more extensively. He first bought a herd of fine French Marino sheep, and sold a good many of the buck to the neighbors, thus improving the stock of the sheep in that vicinity very materially.

For many years he kept a breeding stock stable, in which he kept fine horses and jacks. With this stock, he patronized the fairs pretty extensively. He would attend the Bridgeton fairs, the Russelville fairs, the Newport fairs, and I believe the state fair once when it was held at Terre Haute. Every year when he attended these fairs, he would carry off several good premiums.

Father was his own veterinary surgeon for all his stock of all kinds and sex; and was very successful. He would sometimes bleed horses for the neighbors, when that system was in vogue, not as a profession but for accommodation, and did not charge anything for his services. I now have the instruments he used for such work.

At about the same time he bought his home farm in New Discovery, he also bought the Lewis Miller farm of some 200 acres, two miles due west of his home. On the farm my brother, George, lived for a good many years. Later on at one time he owned a small farm of perhaps 40 acres in Parke county near Judson. In about 1864 or '65 he bought 240 acres of good land in Vermillion county, Illinois. This land, together with his home farm, he divided among his children.

Father was married three times. By his first wife he had seven children. He lost his companion by death, September 2nd, 1842. Was married again to a maiden lady, Miss Juliet Williams, July 30th, 1843. By this union was born four children. Misfortune overtook him again, and he lost this companion September 4th, 1851. He was again married July 24th, 1853 . Had no children by this marriage.

While father's school opportunities were quite limited, yet he gave all his children a fairly good, practical education; such as the common district schools in Parke county afforded at that time.

Let no one imagine that father's life was all sunshine. He had many trials and hardships to encounter, but by indomnible courage and perseverance he would usually overcome them.

Father was strictly a Parke county man, having lived in the county from boyhood, until he passed to a higher life, on July 10th, 1882. Eight children survived him to realize their great loss.

I have written out this biographical sketch rather extended, but I find, to trace the leading incidents in a man's active life career of three score years, must necessarily be lengthy.

If the readers will bear with me, I will mention a few of father's most intimate friends. Let me say, however, that Hon. John G. Davis M. C. and family were quite good friends with father's family. Mrs. Davis was a prominent worker in the Baptist church in Rockville, and when the old church was razed, she insisted the old churchbell should be sent out to New Discovery church, where father lived. It was hung and used at this church for a long time, and may be there yet, so far as I know.

No one can doubt the close friendship that existed between father and Hon. Tilghman Ashley Howard, when they understand that father named his boy (the writer of this sketch) for ''that grand old man.''

Yours truly,

Tilghman Howard Swaim.

INOVATION

In this year of grace 1923 being about forty years since father's death, and near one hundred years since his early pioneer days in Indiana, gives us a good retrospective view concerning the many changes and conditions that have since transpired.

That which must precede all advancement in the evolution of man himself, mentally and spiritually. This fact was father's ability to constantly discover and utilize many of the necessities of his day and time.

In the evolution concerning material things, in the past one hundred years, great improvements have followed each other in rapid succession; and it is interesting to note a few of these extremes.

In those early days they did cooking by the fire on the hearth; now we cook with gas and electricity. Then they used a grease lamp, or a tallow candle; to light their log cabins; now we light with electricity our modern equipped homes.

In manufactures of all kinds, the crude hand-made articles were gradually displaced by those made by machinery.

In transportation, we have evolved from the ''Prairie Schooner'' of the ''Forty-niners'' crossing the continent in about six months, to the airplane making the same distance in twenty four hours or less. Even our fast trains and the automobile are being supplanted by the airplane, which is being utilized to carry both passengers and freight. Also note the change in their carrying the mail on horseback, to our present facilities. Of course, there will be surface transportation indefinitely.

Man, in his desire for more rapid communication, has invented several devices. We have the telegraph and the telephone, followed by the wireless, sending its brief messages over land and sea. We are but entering the ''Wireless Age,'' with its many yet unthought of possibilities. Now comes the wireless Radio, the most wonderful invention that has been discovered. It is in its infancy but it promises seemingly, unlimited possibilities. A scientist says it will be used in the near future for directing navigation, and that it will be possible to direct the path of every moving thing on the face of theearth. Radio is now being rapidly improved by the use of less and less mechanical appliances, and is being used for farther and farther broadcasting its messages for thousands of miles. All going to show that man is gradually reaching farther and more fully into the realm of etheric subsistance, wherein is stored the forces of all sound, and is the medium for all thought, and vibratory activity. And this medium will in time be recognized in its yet higher application for communication--that which is wholly mental, without any mechanical appliances whatever.

Mental telepathy, the direct exchange of ideas between mind and mind, is now being gradually recognized and used by a few people. But this cannot become universally used in man's present stage of evolution, but is quite possible with a large part of humanity, who can awaken and develop these inherent powers within them, if they will employ the spiritual law necessary to do so.

It becomes more apparent to the studious observer that man is continually attaining greater spiritual power. That man is truly a dual being; that he possesses both the physical and the spiritual characteristics, here and now. That his physical body, and all its senses, have their counterpart in the spiritual, and in a far greater degree of expression.

These inner faculties are being developed and used by the more advanced souls on the earth plane. There are pioneers in this as there are in all evolutionary advancement,and like all pioneers, they are slowly accepted by the great majority who must necessarily follow.

We know it to be a fact that a highly developed spiritual person can communicate with another person's subconscious mind and receive an intelligent reply regardless of distance. I believe it is only a matter of time and development , when two individuals equally evolved spiritually, and in harmonious vibration, will be able to communicate intelligently, and with perfect ease, regardless of distance, any place around the World.

Clairaudience, and clairvoyance are now fully verified facts, as seen in their various degrees of development, these being clear hearing, and clear seeing, beyond the range of the physical senses.

All of man's spiritual faculties are governed by the higher spiritual laws as accurately, and scientifically, as are the laws pertaining only to the material side of life. The widest and fullest range of communication yet employed, is what is called, ''Spiritual telepathy,'' the silent language of the soul, or the soul voice, by which the exchange of thought appears instant and unlimited in its action.

In this new era, or higher cycle of evolution, the nearness of the two Worlds becomes more apparent and communication between them becomes easier and more authentic from those in the higher realms of life. Knowing this to be possible, as we do, what a vista it opens for us to realize the possibilities of the ''Great Beyond,'' and to learn from reliable sources the conditions, activities and social life on the various planes above us. As we learn now, and here, from those who have passed on in advance, their knowledge becomes our knowledge, which should be of great benefit to us.

Spiritual telepathy has been employed by us here in our home for years, communicating with those ''beyond,'' and we have found for a truth that the so-called dead, are even more alive than in the earth life, and retain their love and interest in those left behind. Andd as to our conscious contact here on this plane with those beyond, I must say it is possible for our friends who have laid aside their physical or natural bodies to come in their spiritual bodies and communicate with us as naturally and intelligently as when in the flesh. Paul said, ''There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.''

At the Christmas season we have for several years held family reunions here in our home with those who have passed beyond, when each member present, (usually six or eight,) gives us his or her love greeting. At such times we have a real intellectual, spiritual and social feast; the only difference being that we cannot see our spiritual guests with our physical eyes, while they see and clearly recognize us, and fully distinguish our decorations and surroundings.

It is a great privilege and a great blessing to keep in touch with spiritual realms; it adds much to one's happiness and the true understanding of life.

For the benefit of others, I quote the following extracts taken from a few of the many communications received telepathically from father. He said, ''I came into this life expecting to find conditions quite different, as every one does who comes over without any previous knowledge about the facts of life here. However I was pleased to learn that life is one continuous progression. We begin here just where we leave off there. Death does not change us. I found myself just the same in every way except bodily conditions. They were greatly changed, I having lost my heavy physical body for the light etherial one in which I found great freedom. Each one coming over goes to his own place. It being such place, home and environment, crude or beautiful, as he had made by his own earthly living, depending upon whether he had made his life one of selfishness, or one of love and service to others. From all conditions we can progress to higher and higher realms of life, when we comply with the law, and this I do.

''Life is so much more to me than it used to be. It is so much wider and fuller, and deeper, that I have no words to express my views about it. But I am pleased to identify myself with this great life everywhere.

''I do wish that everyone could realize more fully that all life is one, and that there is really no great separation between loved ones gone over, and those left behind. We consider here that the greatest need in the earth life today , is a true knowledge of this after life which would eradicate the erroneous belief about death.''

At one of our Christmas reunions Father said, ''We know that there has been a New Era born, as well as a Christ birthday. Many realize this fact, while millions do not. It is the coming of a new dispensation, the dawning of a greater light, and many will realize truth as never before.''

''On this plane everything is so beautiful and etherial; everything seems so sacred, and filled with everlasting life--filled with the presence of God. Our flowers are so fragrant they perfume the whole atmosphere about us. As we gain more and more of the great truths of the Universe, we are better fitted to enjoy the unfolding beauties of life everywhere.''

. . . . . .

''I realize the Christ presence here far more than I ever did in the earth life. It is joy, peace and satisfaction to know that He is with us continually.''

On Decoration Day, father said, ''I will give you our idea of decorating the graves of the so-called dead. We consider it a commendable form of expressing the idea of recognition, that the soldiers who have died are yet held in grateful and loving memory. Yet many of us over here do not desire to be so remembered, as if we were lying in the cold earth unconscious of all life, when we feel more alive than we ever did in our earth existence.''

''O, that all today who are mourning their loss of dear ones, could know, that there is no death or great separation between loved ones, what a joy it would bring to their aching hearts.''

''Here we recognize and enjoy, the association of our loved ones, and of the many congenial friends whom we meet. You cannot fathom, or measure, by thought, the many things which we enjoy in this marvelous region on the higher planes of life.''

The foregoing is kindly submitted for the benefit of relatives and friends.

Yours very sincerely,

T. Howard Swaim.

SWAIM HISTORY BRIEFS

The Swaims came to America under the name Van Pelt from Luyck (Liege) Holland in 1663 and settled on land in the S. W. part of Long Island. The grant was issued to the new colony direct from the Dutch Government who claimed title to the Hudson River Valley and adjacent islands. They called their new settlement or community New Utrecht.

Teunis Jansen Lanen Van Pelt was the principal founder of the settlement and was given the title of "Patron", a position of similar duties and responsibilities to that now known as Mayor.

The trip to America was made in the little ship Rosetree. It carried 72 persons to form the settlement of "New Utrecht". They landed in March 1663 on Long Island in what is now Brooklyn. Their community settlement was located about 1-1/2 miles north of the present "Coney Island" resort and about one mile west of the "narrows" separating Long Island from Staten Island.

Two families of Van Pelts were among these original settlers of New Utrecht coming over on the Rosetree. They were Teunis Jansen Lanen Van Pelt with his wife Grietje and six children and a brother Matthus Jansen Lanen Van Pelt (who usually signed his name Thys Jansen Van Pelt) and his four children. Thys' wife died on board ship during the crossing and was buried at sea.

The life in the New World was not the dream of bliss and glory that these pioneers had fancied and copies of the state and private papers prove that besides the hardships of an unimproved land and the rigors of the climate, there was constant menace from the Indians. Families were swept away in a night. Villages were raided and burned. Refusal of a demand, no matter how small or unreasonable often resulted in a man being murdered in his own doorway or found in the field with his scalp lock missing.

But the hardest of all because sheltered under the banners of the kind and a pretense of law, were the acts of unruly British soldiers and the tyranny of British Justices.

Many were the petitions of relief from these oppressions. Charges were made that soldiers entered the homes of citizens by day or night and beat into insensibility the occupants, that they took what they found there that suited them; that they terrified women and children, riding madly through the streets, yelling and shouting, and trampled them under the horse's feet.

The Justices would send their officers to enter a house and arrest a man on any or no charge and throw him into jail, until he paid the fine imposed. If he submitted he would soon be released but if he refused he might remain in confinement for indefinite periods. Sometimes whole communities were thus taxed. The County of Richmond asked for relief upon such a charge in 1691, the name of Hendrick Van Pelt being among those who signed the petition.

December 13, 1647, Joost Teunissen Van Pelt entered a complaint against Governor Stuyvesant for unjust imprisonment and so discontented was he with the lack of safety that he asked permission to return to Holland. This was denied him and later on in the same year we find him resigning himself to the inevitable and purchasing a home in Manhattan from Sibout Classen. He evidently decided to protect his own property for in the same year he was prosecuted for purchasing guns from soldiers. That his sense of danger was not imaginary is shown by the fact that in 1701 a record is found of the murder of Anthony, his son, by the Indians during a raid of the village in March.

For defense against the Indians and Pirates subscriptions to a war fund were solicited from time to time, and in the lists are found many responses from Van Pelts. They were in the nature of loans and were returned as the Colonies grew in wealth as well as similar ones subscribed for infant sub-colonies along the Delaware River and in Pennsylvania.

In spite of all these difficulties the little colony grew and prospered; its members bought and sold land and goods, built homes, established businesses and organized companies.

In 1674 grants of lands on Staten Island were made to Jan and Anthony Teunissen Van Pelt and a patent for what was known as "Black Point" was issued to Jan on October 10th of that year. These two men, with their brothers, Art and Wouter were members of the Harlingen Tract Company.

VAN PELT COAT OF ARMS

According to Riestap, a great armorial authority, the Van Pelt family had at least six Coats of Arms.

The one described here seems to express best the characteristic qualities of its members.

The description given is:--

Golden shield, with chevron of black upon it, and the hunting-horns black, lined or decorated with gold and the mouth, or opening, gold.

When this is made in jewels the black (fame) is worked in diamonds. The chevron means protection. The hunting-horn, or bugle means triumph. It says "I am ready for the fray." A Leader. Encouragement of army in battle.

The black and gold mantle, or pallium, flowing down on each side of the shield, represents drapery from the helmet, worn to tatters in the service of the soverign, with jagged cuts sustained in battle from the spears of his enemies.

The helmet is that of a Baronet or Knight.

The golden shield is the mark of a noble personage, a man of "Excellent metal." (See colored plat opposite page 7 in Van Pelt Geanology)

VAN PELT BECOMES SWAIM

According to Menett the Van Pelt who became known as Swaim was through Anthony, baptized as Teunis Van Pelt who married Marie Dregau and settled on Staten Island about 1700.

Teunis Jansen Lanen Van Pelt - Grietje Jans, 1st w.
b. in Holland, d. 1720-1

Anthony Teunissen Van Pelt - Magdalena Joosten
b. in Holland, Constable

Anthony (bpt. Teunis Van Pelt - Marie Dregau settled on Staten Island oa.
1700 and name changed to Swaim.

According to family tradition the Swaims of North Carolina are descended from Anthony whose sons Michael, John and William went there and their descendants later migrated to Indiana.

THE VAN PELT MANOR HOUSE

The home of Teunis Van Pelt was called the "Manor House". Most of the stone for this building came from Holland as ballast for the ship. The house still stands and is under the control of the "Daughters of the American Revolution". They are responsible for its preservation. I have visited this home on numerous occasions, the last visit being made in 1949. The building contains seven rooms, five downstairs and two upstairs. It occupies the center of a block of ground (now a park with benches for resting and recreation purposes). The building is trimmed with the usual old fashioned Dutch ornaments on porches, eaves, etc. The old fireplaces are lined with beautiful colored tile brought from Holland. A picture of this home can be seen on page 141 of the book "Reminiscences of Old New Utrecht and Gowanus" by Mrs. Bleecker Bangs, and opposite page 19 of the "Genealogy of the Van Pelt Family" by Effee M. Smith. These volumes are now out of print as they were published in 1912. I have both volumes in my library.

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME SWAIM

There are a number of rumors regarding the original of the name Swaim. None of these rumors are based on recorded records and it will probably never be known just why Anthony (baptized Teunis) Jansen Van Pelt added "Swaim" to his name, or why some of his other immediate relatives adopted the same name.

The rumor which appears the most plausible is as follows:

The settlement of "New Amsterdam" later New York was surrounded by English Colonies (Mass., Rhode Island, Conn., New Haven, Vermont, New Jersey and Delaware, hence many settlers in this area were English or French (from Canada) as well as Dutch.

When the English fleet appeared in the New York harbor in 1664 due to lack of cooperation and organization of the Dutch settlers, the Dutch governor (Stuyvesant) surrendered to the English, and many of them refused to make such an oath. Persecution followed and citizens were fined, thrown into prison and some of them executed.

New Utrecht was one of the leaders in this situation and it is a known fact that some of the Van Pelts were taken to Manhattan, held in jail and fined for their action. At least one of the Van Pelt sons was shot down in cold blood by the authorities. These conditions were responsible for the change in residents of part of the family, some going to Staten Island, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and later to North Carolina.

It is rumored that a secret organization was formed by the Van Pelts and some of their associates to resist the English encroachments on what they believed to be their rights. This organization was given the name "Sworn (to) Withhold Allegiance (to) Invading Monarch". The initials of this name spelled Swaim and was adopted for general use. Anthony Thyssen (or Theunis) was caught and searched. He was carrying this written name "Swaim" in his pocket. He was held by the English and questioned about this name and told them it was his name. From then on, so the legend goes, he called himself Swaim, or as pronounced by the Dutch "Swim" the a being silent. As all early records were written in ink by different scribes, the name was difficult to write and after 250 years is equally dificult to read now. This explains the apparent variations as Sweem, Swim, Swam, etc.

The writer has a picture of a house on Staten Island owned by Martinew Swaim who sold it in 1790 to Peter Cortelou. A record of this transfer is recorded on page 133 and picture of house on page 162 in "Pre Revolutionary Dutch Houses and Families" by Rosalie Fellows Baily published in 1936. The introduction of this 612 page volume was written by Franklin D. Roosevelt. Only 666 copies of this book were printed. All are numbered. I have volume #416.

SWAIMS IN NORTH CAROLINA AND INDIANA

The Swaims who went to North Carolina are descendants from Anthony. Three sons, Michael, John and William went there about the time of the Revolutionary War and settled in Wilkes, Gilford and Surry Counties. They are recorded in these counties in the Federal Census of 1790 as follows: Michael Swaim, wife and eleven children: William, wife and eight children: John, wife and eleven children.

Michael Swaim (son of John) with two brothers John Jr., and Moses migrated to Indiana in 1819. At that time my grandfather Peter M. Swaim, son of Michael was about one year old. Michael settled with his family in Park County (near Rockville), other members of the family settled in other locations of Park Co., Vigo Co., St. Joseph Co., Orange Co. and Washington Co.

DIRECT DESCENT FROM VAN PELT

The direct descent of our branch of the Swaim family from the earliest settlement in Long Island in 1663 follows:

1. Anthony Teunissen Van Pelt, born in Holland, married Magdalena

Joosten.

2. Anthony (baptized Teunis) Van Pelt Swaim born in Holland married Marie Drageau.
3. William Swaim born on Staten Island, migrated with brothers and families to North Carolina.
4. John Swaim, soldier war of 1812 in James Marlens Co. (see Roll Camp Jackson 1814) home shown as Wilkes Co., North Carolina, married Elizabeth Vicroy.
5. Michael Swaim born Staten Island, married Elizabeth Barns. Capt. in War of 1812, migrated to Indiana with two brothers and family.
6. Peter M. Swaim, Baptist Preacher, born in Wilkes Co. No. Carolina married Nancy Ann Ball of Rockville, Ind.
7. Thomas Jefferson Swaim, born in Missouri, married Rachael Florence Miller - Caroline Turner, Baptist Deacon, Merchant, Farmer, Justice of Peace.
8. John Earl Swaim, born in Kansas, married Blanche Munger. writer of this article - Chicago 9 Ill. 4122 S. Union Ave Jan 1954

The complete family histories shows eight Swaims or Swims in Revolutionary War and War of 1812-14.
